

ONE DAY WITHOUT US?

Migrants come to Britain to invest in business, to join their families and to work in our public services, whilst others are refugees fleeing persecution.

There are approximately 8 million migrants living in the UK and 5 million UK migrants living abroad. About half of migrants in the UK are EU citizens, and the others come from every corner of the world.

As the UK prepares to leave the EU with its policy of 'free movement', we will inevitably need a new immigration policy.

However, the debate on immigration is being poisoned by politicians seeking to exploit community divisions for their own electoral advantage, and sections of the press who believe that sensational headlines sell better than reasoned debate.

So let us reclaim the debate and discuss this rationally, based on the needs of our communities and the economy, while showing respect for migrant workers. Join the debate.

LET'S HAVE A SENSIBLE DISCUSSION ABOUT IMMIGRATION

Imagine for a moment a day without migrant workers.

Where would our IT industry be without the developers and programmers from overseas. What about our fruit farms where so much of the produce is picked by migrant workers.

Would we have to go without our mid-morning coffee, clean our own office and care for our elderly?

Do migrants pay more in taxes than they take in benefits?

Why don't we train our youth to perform high tech jobs or qualify as nurses etc?

Would the NHS collapse without migrant workers?

Which industries have been lost because of migrant labour?

Are some employers exploiting migrants by paying them less?

Are migrants responsible for the crisis in house building?

What happens to children who start at school, but can't speak English?

Have migrants enriched the culture of our towns?
